Creekwatcher Currents: May/June 2014

Volume VII, Issue 3

June 29, 2014

Good morning, Creekwatchers!

We are well in the thick of the season and are rapidly approaching the mid-point. Thanks to all of you for being absolute rock stars and making another great season happen!

Delaware Watersheds has posted some photos from last Saturday's EcoPaddle on their Facebook page (no FB account needed to view). Make sure you check out Phil Miller's selfie as Nan Zamorski paddles behind him, keeping their canoe going, Galen, Don (Sandi's husband), Alan, and Dan on board Galen's boat, Frayser and John's backs, me, Bryan, Amanda and her beau, Eddie, and others from a distance, and more! We had a blast, and thanks to Bryan at Rommel Outdoors, Stan at Adrenaline High, Trap Pond State Park, Troop 141 (Felton), and Delaware Nature Society for providing boats. Adrenaline High has also posted super-fresh photos (uploaded while I've been writing this Currents!), so please check those out, too.

The report card launch is just around the corner, and we invite you to both events. More info about the launch events follows below.

Thank you for your service!

The NWA is hosting Food, Land, and People Teacher Workshops in both Delaware and Maryland this summer. Both workshops are free and occur over a two-day period (July 21-22 in MD and August 4-5 in DE). Check out more about the DE workshop and the MD workshop, and please share with any educators in your life!
